

I don't write testimonials as a rule. But I am making an exception in this case. I bought a GRR-Ripper at my Atlanta Rockler store. It is not cheap when considering it is replacing a push stick I made from scrap. However, I have found at least 3 separate uses for the tool making just one little project. The most significant use for this tool (so far) is a safety device for my fingers while working with my router table. I am so impressed with its ability for this purpose that I am moved to send you a couple of pictures of how it keeps my fingers well away from the bit while giving me complete control of the operation. I love this tool and will be buying the attachment as soon as I can get back to the store.

Thanks for saving my fingers.
